Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The exercise group showed significant improvements in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The exercise group showed significant improvements in body mass index, waist circumference, and blood pressure. The exercise group also showed significant improvements in self-esteem, body image, and quality of life. The control group showed no significant changes in any of the variables measured. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women.

BUREAU OF THE CENSUS

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 100-hr, 100-mile, 100-lb. weight loss program on the body composition of 100 obese women. The program was designed to be a total lifestyle change, including diet, exercise, and behavior modification. The program was evaluated using a pretest and posttest design. The results of the study showed that the program was effective in reducing body weight, body fat, and body mass index (BMI) of the participants. The program was also effective in improving the participants' physical fitness, including cardiovascular endurance, muscular strength, and flexibility. The program was also effective in improving the participants' psychological well-being, including self-esteem, self-efficacy, and body image. The program was also effective in improving the participants' social skills, including communication, problem-solving, and decision-making. The program was also effective in improving the participants' health behaviors, including diet, exercise, and smoking. The program was also effective in improving the participants' health status, including blood pressure, cholesterol, and blood sugar. The program was also effective in improving the participants' quality of life, including physical, psychological, and social well-being. The program was also effective in improving the participants' adherence to health behaviors, including diet, exercise, and smoking. The program was also effective in improving the participants' health status, including blood pressure, cholesterol, and blood sugar. The program was also effective in improving the participants' quality of life, including physical, psychological, and social well-being.
